ICRA Limited

FEE ARRANGEMENT WITH RATED ENTITIES: GENERAL DISCLOSURE

ICRA is generally appointed and compensated by issuers for rating/grading their debt instruments/other securities. In some cases, ICRA may be appointed and compensated by investors, intermediaries, or third parties for the same. The rating/grading compensation (that is, the rating/grading fee) has no bearing on the rating/grading assigned, or on the processes, analytical or otherwise, associated with the rating/grading exercise. ICRA analysts involved directly in executing rating/grading assignments are neither responsible for business development and nor do they engage in any discussion over fees with existing or prospective rating/grading clients. ICRA employees responsible for business development and involved in discussions on rating/grading fees with existing or prospective clients do not participate in the rating/grading process.

The rating/grading fee consists of an initial rating/grading fee, which is determined and charged up front (that is, before the rating/grading is assigned), and an annual surveillance fee, which is charged for monitoring the assigned rating/grading over the life of the rated/graded instrument/other security or till such time that the rating/grading is withdrawn, whichever is earlier. The annual surveillance fee is payable if the rating/grading is accepted and/or used by the entity concerned. If the grading is a one-time exercise, as in the case of Initial Public Offerings (IPOs), no surveillance fees is payable.

ICRA's rating/grading fee is based on factors including the type, size and complexity of the debt instrument/other security being rated. ICRA may consider using an alternative fee structure for volume issuers and such other entities. For rating of debt products that have a unique/complex structure or require considerably greater analytical effort, ICRA reserves the right to charge a fee higher than that charged for other products of similar size. ICRA makes its fee schedule available to clients on request. ICRA reserves the right to modify its fee schedule when circumstances so warrant.

Currently, ICRA does not charge any fee or receive any compensation from its rating/grading clients for disseminating their ratings/gradings and the related analysis/commentary. Such dissemination is usually done through channels including, but not limited to, ICRA's website and its publications, besides the media.
